

Press Advantage Reveals What Low Cost Distribution Services Don't Disclose About Content Placement

August 04, 2026

Las Vegas, NV - August 04, 2026 -

Press Advantage, a full-service press release distribution company, has released new educational content addressing widespread misconceptions about budget press release distribution services and the actual value of their advertised outlet counts.

The company's latest initiative focuses on educating businesses about the significant differences between temporary content placements on low-authority sites and permanent distribution through verified news outlets. Through detailed analysis and industry insights, Press Advantage highlights critical questions that businesses should ask before selecting a distribution service.

Many budget distribution services advertise impressive outlet counts without disclosing that these placements often appear on duplicated shell sites, temporary feeds that get purged after days or weeks, or low-authority domains that provide minimal value for brand visibility and search engine optimization. This lack of Press Advantage distribution transparency has led many businesses to invest in services that fail to deliver lasting results.

"When businesses see a service advertising distribution to hundreds or thousands of outlets at rock-bottom prices, they naturally assume they're getting tremendous value," said Jeremy Noetzelman, CEO of Press Advantage. "What they don't realize is that many of these placements disappear within days, appear on sites with no real readership, or get duplicated across networks of shell sites that search engines ignore. The cost per placement becomes meaningless when you don't know where your content actually lands or how long it stays there."

The distinction between temporary and permanent placements represents a fundamental difference in distribution value. Temporary placements that get removed from news feeds after a short period provide limited benefit for long-term brand building and search visibility. In contrast, permanent placements that remain indexed and accessible continue providing value months and years after initial publication.

Press Advantage emphasizes three critical factors businesses should evaluate when comparing distribution services: the permanence of placements, the quality and authority of outlet networks, and the availability of verifiable reporting that demonstrates where content actually appears. Without clear answers to these questions, businesses cannot accurately assess the true value of any distribution service.

The company has expanded its educational resources through the Press Advantage YouTube Channel, where industry professionals can access detailed explanations of distribution mechanics, outlet verification processes, and strategies for maximizing press release effectiveness. These resources aim to help businesses make informed decisions based on actual distribution outcomes rather than inflated outlet counts.

"Our goal is to help businesses understand what they're actually purchasing when they invest in press release distribution," added Noetzelman. "By providing clear information about how distribution networks operate and what distinguishes quality placements from quantity-focused approaches, we're empowering companies to make decisions that align with their communication and marketing objectives."

Press Advantage operates a verified outlet network that includes distribution to major news sites, local television station websites, and established digital publications. Founded in 2011 by Velluto Tech Incubator in Las Vegas, Nevada, the company provides comprehensive press release services including professional writing, distribution, SEO optimization, and detailed reporting. The company maintains a permanent archive of all distributed content and provides clients with verifiable reports showing exactly where their press releases appear.
